154 students participated in Aggie Ambassadors classes. Students learned about career pathways and the diverse array of agricultural, environmental and human/social science fields in the college

347

347 exploratory and incoming international students participated in advising workshops.

Students who participated in webinars identified the resources most useful to them:

- Dean's Office and Major advisors
- Online tools such as MyDegree and Oasis
- Departmental websites

Academic Advisors are the resources students would most recommend to others (Dean's Office and Major advisors, peer advisors and faculty advisors)

451 students participated in Slice of Advising in-person or remotely (includes Facebook Live participants in spring 2020)

"[Slice of Advising] made me like the College of Ag because I felt like they were trying to connect with students. It feels smaller because of these types of events."

"[Slice of Advising was] not intimidating, [it was] casual, come when you are able, relaxed... less pressure than an individual appointment."

65

65 students participated in six different service projects. Projects included: weeding, mulching, harvesting fruit at local farms; clean-up and tree planting at local parks; supporting elementary school fun-run; helping at local food pantry

"[I] improved my teamwork and communication skills which (are) applicable to almost everything."
—Service event participant

"I gained newfound respect for all the work people put in to give food out."—Service event participant

21 students participated in World Ag Expo and

- Interacted with hundreds of prospective students, high school teachers, alumni and industry professionals
- Shared information about CA&ES research and programs with the public
- Cultivated their own leadership and public speaking skills

8

8 Aggie Ambassador officers improved their leadership skills as student leaders of the Aggie Ambassador program

Academic Probation webinar participants identified factors impacting their grades and developed strategies to address these challenges

Holistic advising practices during subject-to-dismissal advising empowered many students to have follow-up meetings with Undergraduate Academic Programs Dean's Office and Major advisors and to connect with campus resources
